Located at the western end of the Zirkel is the Staatliche Kunsthalle (State Art Gallery). Besides art, there are other high-end shops, too, such as Löb High-Fidelity for acoustic enjoyment and Goldschmiede Zöllner for fine jewellery.

Turmberg

The "Turmberg" is the prominent hill overlooking Durlach, the town surrounding the former royal residence of Baden. It is 256m high and the northernmost peak of the Black Forest on the transition between the central German uplands and the rolling hills of the Kraichgau. From it, there's a wonderful view of the Rhine Plain, Durlach, and Karlsruhe. Germany's oldest funicular railway, the "Turmbergbahn", is one way of getting to the top. Alternatively, those of a more robust constitution can take the steps of the "Hexenstäfle". The Anders restaurant on Turmberg offers a wide selection of regional and seasonal cuisine.

The "Ständehaus" remembrance site

The "Badische Ständehaus" in Karlsruhe is rightly regarded as an institution that paved the way for democracy in Germany. The "Ständehaus" remembrance site, where the history of the Baden state parliament is presented in an exhibition, has been keeping the memory of this tradition alive since 1993. Free admission.

"Marktplatz" and the Pyramid

The "Marktplatz" around the pyramid is the best-known square in Karlsruhe and forms the city centre. It also accommodates the city's iconic landmark, the pyramid built in 1823. Beneath it lies the crypt of the church "Konkordienkirche", demolished in 1807, in which the city's founding father, Margrave Karl Wilhelm von Baden-Durlach (1679-1738), lies buried. Also located there, facing Karlsruhe's town hall, is the Protestant municipal church with a tower and steeple almost 62 metres high as well as the Grand Duke Ludwig fountain. Numerous cafés and restaurants around the square invite you to take a break and watch the world go by.

The Square of Fundamental Rights

The Square of Fundamental Rights, built in 2005, is situated between "Zirkel" and "Schlossplatz" in the pedestrian zone connecting "Marktplatz" and Karlsruhe Palace. The square is dotted with 24 double-faced signs displaying statements made by judges, lawyers, and citizens relating to different aspects of right and wrong. The square is a gift from the City of Karlsruhe to the nearby Federal Constitutional Court.

Prinz-Max-Palais

Today, "Prinz-Max-Palais" – originally a grand retirement residence of a business tycoon, then a palace of the Baden high nobility, residence of the last Imperial Chancellor of the Reich, seat of the Federal Constitutional Court, and university building – accommodates a wide array of cultural institutions: a department of the municipal museum, the literary society, the museum of Upper Rhine literature, and the children's and youth library.

Karlsruhe Palace

Karlsruhe Palace is the point around which the city's fan-shape opens out. The palace is surrounded by the magnificent palace garden and the spacious palace forecourt. Today, Karlsruhe Palace accommodates the Baden State Museum and is always a good motif for a photograph. It was built between 1715 and 1718 on behalf of Margrave Karl Wilhelm von Baden-Durlach and was henceforth the palace of residence of the ruling sovereigns for almost 200 years. The Karlsruhe PALACE ILLUMINATIONS have been taking place here in summer every year since 2015. With its 170-metre projection area, Karlsruhe Palace then becomes Germany's probably biggest but most certainly most beautiful big screen. 24 high-performance beamers bathe the palace in another kind of magnificence every evening – free of charge and open to everyone, right in the heart of Karlsruhe.

Straße der Demokratie (The Street of Democracy)

A tour of discovery along the so-called "Straße der Demokratie" is always worthwhile: Karlsruhe was the birthplace of the Baden Constitution in 1818 and is still home to Germany's highest courts today. A whole row of cities and institutions with historical ties to the freedom movement have come together to increase awareness of this fascinating cultural and historical heritage in the public domain. Their cross-border project is the "Straße der Demokratie". In Karlsruhe, the "street of democracy" leads to a total of eight locations featuring in this history, among them the "Ständehaus", the town hall, the Federal Court of Justice, Prinz-Max-Palais, the Federal Constitutional Court, and the Square of Fundamental Rights.

Karlsruhe

Welcome to Karlsruhe!

In the last few years, Karlsruhe, one of the youngest cities in Germany, has developed into a vibrant and dynamic large city in which savour vivre is paramount. Owing to its location in the Upper Rhine region, Karlsruhe is regarded as one of the sunniest cities in the country, nestled in a scenic rural landscape. Karlsruhe really is a city of green, with more than 800 ha of public parks extending an open invitation to use leisure time actively. Karlsruhe's uniquely radial layout was the brainchild of its founding father, Margrave Karl Wilhelm, who had his palace built as the centre of the city in 1715, forming the point from which the roads radiate outwards. Culture is a key issue in Karlsruhe, which has a multitude of theatres, museums, and galleries to offer. When it comes to going out, you're really spoilt for choice: from clubs to bars and cinemas, the city provides everything night owls could wish for. Traditional microbreweries are famous for their Baden specialities, whilst the trendy cafés exude big-city flair. There's a wide range of shopping opportunities, in ETTLINGER TOR, for example, southern Germany's biggest indoor shopping centre, or on Baden's longest shopping avenue, the "Kaiserstraße".

Rheinstetten

Young, modern, and offering quality of life

Rheinstetten is a young and modern town. Arising from the municipalities of Forchheim, Mörsch, and Neuburgweier, it has become a large district town with 21,000 residents. Rheinstetten lies in the Karlsruhe "Technologieregion", directly on the Rhine and right next-door to Karlsruhe as an important regional centre in the heart of Europe.

Two thirds of the district are natural areas, whereby a valuable landscape has evolved, a special feature of which are the Rhine wetlands. The town is surrounded by meadows, fields, and orchards, all of which are a favourite destination for cyclists, joggers, and ramblers. Rheinstetten's most popular places for an outing, however, are the two bathing lakes: as a leisure and recreation area, the Epplesee is appreciated even by water sports enthusiasts from outside the region whereas the Fermasee, being part of a nature reserve and a protected landscape, offers more peaceful environment.

In Rheinstetten, citizen involvement and celebrating together go hand in hand, which can be experienced at a multitude of festivals and events all year round. With 130 clubs and associations, numerous cultural and social institutions as well as dynamic church communities, Rheinstetten offers attractive leisure and sports facilities and a stimulating community life. Besides other facilities such as the lovingly designed museum for settlement history in the PAMINA region, the town also offers a municipal library and an indoor swimming pool.

Ettlingen

Away from the big city – historical and bustling

Ettlingen's historical Old Town with its mediaeval, winding alleyways and buzzing pedestrian precinct invites you to stroll, explore and shop. Away from the big city, a wide diversity of shops offers a special shopping experience. The Old Town's multifaceted offerings are rounded off by numerous restaurants, pubs, bars, beer gardens and cafés, providing a great selection of fare to pamper your palate. A gourmet restaurant, hearty cuisine, a snack in the microbrewery, or just coffee and cake... there's something to suit every taste.

After a strenuous day at the trade fair, simply wind down and relax - which makes the Albgaubad, with its spacious sauna landscape and magnificent sauna garden, the right place to head for. The Ettlingen Legends are another highlight, which the cursed master baker tells at night on his ramble through the Old Town with burning torches - spooky, witty, beautiful, and giving listeners the creeps. Of course, you can explore the Old Town on an evening tour with the night watchman, too. Besides a varied cultural programme, the Palace Festival (Schlossfestspiele) offers musicals and theatre of the finest quality from June to August. Ettlingen, don't miss it.
